

1                                    ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

2                    A necktie assembly is provided in conjunction with a method 3                    to facilitate disposition of a necktie on a wearer in a neat and 4                    decorative, new and fanciful, yet operative position. The 5                    necktie assembly includes a base member interconnected to a face 6                    member, the intersection of the members forming an opening or 7                    slot through which at least an overlying section of the necktie
8                    may pass through. The base member includes an attachment 9                    mechanism structured to removably secure the base member to an 10                   underlying section of a necktie, adjacent the neck of the 11                   wearer. The face member may include one or more adornment 12                   features structured to accentuate the appearance of the wearer
13                   of the necktie assembly. The method facilitates donning a 14                   necktie in a neat and decorative, new and fanciful, yet 15                   operative position without requiring the skills necessary to 16                   fully tie a decorative knot in the necktie.